ENVIRONMENTAL DECISION

City Plays It As It Lays

A second special meeting was called last night by Upland Mayor Abner B. Haldeman to further consider the environmental act ordered by the California Supreme Court Sept. 21.

Maintaining a "wait and see" attitude, Upland City Council found that they were still in a quandry over environmental guidelines at last week's meeting. Without specific guidelines concerning the required environmental impact reports on proposed construction projects--the council found that its hands were tied on the majority of land development related items they attempted to act on.

City Manager Elwin "Pinky" Alder said he'd already received one environmental impact report and another contractor indicated that he was also preparing one. Maroney instructed builders to go ahead and make reports which the administrative staff would review and set a public hearing date at which time the environmental impact would be determined and the city would make recommendations.

There was no agreement concerning the guidelines requirement at the first special meeting held on Oct. 10. The Council chose not to accept a temporary resolution drawn up by City Attorney Donald E. Maroney. Instead they settled on the "disclaimer" policy on building permits as did many other Southern California cities, (this waives the applicants' right to sue the city for losses suffered because of future environmental protection regulations).

Maroney also said there was significant discussion about the environmental impact statements during last week's League of California Cities Conference in Anaheim. He said it was noted then that any guideline procedures being set up are merely "interim plans" which are subject to change if new legal interpretations grow out to the Supreme Court's Sept. 21 decision. He also said that Mono County is appealing the decision and the state attorney general's office is asking the court for clarifications. The State Legislature may also act in the near future either to set forth more definitive guidelines or to amend the state's Environmental Quality Act of 1970 to exempt private projects.

Maroney did say however, "We should get something on the books soon to implement the court's decision and enable contractors who have substantial amounts of money invested to get going on their building projects."

Maroney also brought out that many lending institutions are refusing to loan money until an environmental impact report is submitted on any building proposal. Councilman Harold A. Ballin suggested that Upland follow the county's guideline questionnaire during this interim period. (The county's planning department will review building permits according to an environmental checklist and decide if there is an environmental question that should be reviewed).

Mayor Haldeman and a couple councilmen agreed Thursday on using the city's present Environmental Committee to review permits and make recommendations regarding environmental impact studies.

The mayor and Council were in hopes of firming up a definite set of guidelines this week and thereby establishing the framework in which the city will decide when a builder would have to submit a written impact report before a permit could be granted.

Maroney drew up a questionnaire to be completed by each applicant for a building permit, conditional use permit or other construction related action.

Firemen Grievances Aired At City Meeting

Concerned Upland firemen and their wives and friends patiently waited throughout the lengthy council meeting last week for a chance to address the council about their long-standing grievances over work hours.

Mark Reid, negotiator from the California League of City Employees Association, made a brief presentation to the council concerning the nine month unresolved dispute.

He mentioned that some 7,000 Upland residents had signed petitions favoring the firemen's position, (reading: "We the undersigned citizens instruct that the City Council amend the work week for shift employees of the Upland Fire Department in the following manner: That the work week for shift employees be established at 56 hours per week; that no salary be reduced from that indicated in the '72-'73 salary resolution number 2409; that the "Pay Back" system be eliminated and that the vacation period required by law be granted without penalty).

City Atty's Donald Maroney then objected to Reid's one-sided presentation of an issue currently being discussed in private negotiating sessions. The audience applauded loudly when Councilman Harold A. Ballin remarked that Reid "has had little more opportunity than to clear his throat."

Throughout Reid's comments both Maroney and Mayor Haldeman asked the firemen's spokesman if he wished to declare an impasse. Reid didn't answer this.

Councilman George Gibson told Reid that the city had granted the firemen's request calling for a meeting of the Policemen-Fireman committee to discuss the dispute, but that the firemen had to cancel the requested meeting because of a conflict in scheduling.

After a 10 minute closed executive session, Mayor Haldeman told Reid the council had voted to give him 15 minutes to make an uninterrupted presentation. At that time Reid said that an offer made on Oct. 10 to reduce duty time to 59 hours on Jan. 1, 1973, and then reach the desired 56 hour level by 1974 has yet to be answered by the city.

Reid and Ernie Miller, president of the Upland City Employees Association, agreed to submit their dispute to "binding arbitration."

Haldeman Relates 'Cities Conference' Happenings To CC

Having just returned from the annual League of California Cities Conference in Anaheim, Upland's Mayor Abner B. Haldeman touched on the highlights of the conference in a brief presentation to the Upland Chamber of Commerce last Thursday.

Haldeman began by objecting to the lack of saying prayers at the beginning of every session rather than only saying prayers at the beginning of the day. He said: "I have the firm belief that the problems of our cities and homes increase in direct proportion to the number of people who let God leave their lives."

The mayor went on to say that environmental questions were the popular topic throughout the meetings. Speakers indicated that cities must "plan positively—not financially"—that ecology is upon us and regardless of cost, we must accomplish a cleanup. He also said revenue sharing was cleverly designed in relation to an inverse ratio between population and income basis. He indicated that it was doubtful the federal government would in fact have "no strings attached" on the funds as promised. He said because the funds are distributed on the basis of population and income that some cities with half the population of Upland could get almost as much in revenue sharing funds.

Ernie Miller, president of the Upland City Employees Association, and Rick Lebel, president of the Upland Firefighters Association, spoke to the chamber in rebuttal to the mayor's presentation about firemen's working hours at the first chamber meeting on Sept. 28.

Miller said he hoped "some day soon in America and in our city we'll be able to resolve labor-management problems, but this will not happen if we don't respect each other in our mutual needs." He went on to say that Upland's 17 firemen have asked for a reduction in the number of hours they serve for the past three years. (Upland firemen currently have a 63 duty hour work week, with six of these hours designated as "paybacks" to be made up at a time set by the fire chief—they're seeking a 56 hour work week and the elimination of "paybacks".

Volunteer Firemen Sought In Cucamonga

He said the volunteers will be paid for attending training meetings and for the fires they're called to help fight. Uniforms and necessary safety equipment will be furnished by the Fire Department. # Madonna Of The Trails: Ms. Upland

PATRICIA REID

For 43 years she's overlooked Upland, and has caught the eye of nearly every passerby. Quite often people remark on the Madonna of the Trail's beauty and perhaps inwardly ponder the courageous pioneer spirit which she represents.

Upland's madonna has 11 sisters across the country which all look exactly like her—10 feet tall, weighing five tons. In 1922 the National Old Trails Road Association came into being with Independence, Missouri Judge Harry S. Truman as its president, and combined National Pike, Santa Fe Trail, Boone's Lick Road, Washington or Braddock Road, Cumberland Road, and the old trail from Santa Fe to California (followed by many Forty Niners). Ms. John Trigg Moss of St. Louis, National DAR Commission Chairman, had the idea to mark the Santa Fe Trail with the pioneer mother statue monuments across country. (she got the idea from a statue in Portland, Oregon, erected to Sacajawea, the Shoshone Indian woman who guided Lewis and Clark across the continent from Ft. Mandan, N. D. to the mouth of the Columbia River, the statue shows Sacajawea carrying her small Baptiste in the papoose carrier on her back. For five months Ms. Moss and her son John worked on the idea and made rough sketches patterned after Sacajawea. The final sketches were presented to the German sculptor August Leimbach).

All 12 Madonnas are made of algonite stone of which Missouri granite is the main aggregate. All monuments were poured in the same mold and after sculpturing were shipped to the 12 locations, where they were mounted. Each cost $1,000, with the $12,000 being assumed by DAR chapters from all the states; Texas and New York contributing the largest amounts. The chapters in each state took care of the freight, mounting, dedication ceremony and accompanying social activities. All 12 monuments bear the same inscriptions. The monument at Springfield, Ohio was the first one dedicated on July 4, 1928. Other statues are located in Bethesda, Maryland; Washington, Pennsylvania; Wheeling, West Virginia; Richfield, Indiana; Vandalia, Illinois; Lexington, Missouri; Council Grove, Kansas; Lamar, Colorado; Albuquerque, New Mexico and Springerville, Arizona.

The Madonna is dressed in homespun, wearing a quaint sunbonnet. Carrying a baby in her left arm with her little son clinging to her skirt on the right, she looks the part of a sturdy, work-hardened woman showing fortitude and perseverance, peering into the future, DAR chose her to stand as a symbol of the courage and faith of womanhood, "whose strength and love aided so greatly in conquering the wilderness and establishing permanent homes."

Upland's attractive Euclid Avenue was chosen for the twelfth and last Madonna placed in California to mark "the end of the trail." She's the only madonna facing south -- the rest all face west. She faces south looking down the valley that will be home with the impressive Mt. Baldy looming tall behind her. Upland's statue located on Euclid Ave. at Foothill Blvd. is said to mark the "road connecting San Bernardino and Los Angeles—later known as the American Post Road." In 1826 Jedediah Smith, seeking a river flowing westward, is said to have led a band of 16 trappers over this trail. They were the first Americans to enter California overland.

A marker on the 9th Street side of Harris Pharmacy indicates that the Santa Fe Trail was actually at 9th Street rather than Foothill Blvd.

It was a rainy day Feb. 1, 1929 when Upland's Madonna was dedicated by the San Antonio and Los Serranos Chapters of DAR, National Old Trails Roads Association, Upland Chamber of Commerce and other Upland civic groups. Two famous people were involved in the dedication ceremony—Ms. Theodore Jesse Hoover, sister-in-law of Herbert Hoover, and Judge Harry S. Truman, who gave the dedication speech.

The Madonna was unveiled by Carolyn Emily Cook, then 81, who had made a trip by ox-cart from Brighton, Iowa to California when she was three years old. The city of Upland raised $1,500 to bring her here. In her base is a memory box which was not sealed until Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12, 1929. It contains newspapers, books, coins and other valuable printed matter to be opened on February 12, 1979, the fiftieth anniversary of the unveiling.

According to Winnie Kissick, current regent of the San Antonio Chapter of DAR, there's a possibility that the memory box may be opened in 1976, three years early, in honor of the nation's Bicentennial Celebration. Ms. Kissick said the Rose Parade's theme will be "Spirit of '76" that year and DAR chapters are trying to raise money to have a patriotic float in the parade and would like to open the box at that time.

At the dedication, the pageantry of progress was depicted in an impressive parade. First came the development of transit, beginning with the Indians on horseback with luggage slung between poles dragged behind the animals. Then followed the succeeding epochs of transportation, including Spanish colonial and other early American types, leading to the covered wagon and the stagecoach, with, lastly, the automobile and the aeroplane.

INDOMITABLE WOMAN -- For 43 years the "Madonna of the Trail" has stood on the corner of Foothill Blvd. and Euclid Ave. in Upland -- a symbol of pioneer inspiration and courage. Upland is honored to have the twelfth in a series of similar statues stretching across the country -- designating California as the end of the trail across country.

Upland Man Appointed Assistant To Board

Robert Imig of Upland, has received the appointment as assistant to Board of Equalization Member, Richard Nevins.

When making the announcement Nevins said, "Bob's demonstrated ability in increasingly responsible State civil service positions well qualifies him for this executive position as my Assistant."

Prior to his appointment, Imig was supervising auditor in the Board's Hollywood office. He worked on the staff of Price Waterhouse and Company before starting his state career with the Board in 1964.

Imig, a native of San Bernardino, attended San Bernardino Valley College, where he received the Bank of America Business Scholarship. He continued his education as an accounting major at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, graduating with honors in 1962.

Bob and wife, Sharon, have two daughters, Julie and Janet. They are avid outdoor enthusiasts, said to have explored every remote area of California.

UPLAND FIRST

Town Turns Out For Band Review

Spirits were high and the town was packed for Upland's First Invitational Parade and Band Review held last Saturday. Approximately 15 marching bands from all over the southland participated in competition before the Southern California Band Association Judges.

Tony Malone, manager of Upland Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the event, said "the enthusiasm was tremendous" and that he hopes the parade will become an annual event. Upland High's Highlander Band hosted the event and although Scottish drum major Jim Scott wasn't eligible for any awards, his performance certainly reaped a lot of compliments.

Montclair High School Band walked off with all the trophies! They won the Sweepstakes Award and also first place in Majorette and first in Drum Major awards. Quartz Hill High School from Palm Dale won first place in marching band competition; Charter Oak High School from Covina won second and Gladstone High School of Azusa won third.

Sycamore Junior High School of Anaheim was number one band in the Junior High category. Gladstone High was first in drill teams while Charter Oak was second and Montclair High third. Sycamore Junior High School was also second in the majorette division and Charter Oak took third.

Reseda took first in the Youth Band competition. Upland's Deb Stars won first in the drum squad and the Comets of Pomona were second with Compton's Elks—nettes third.

Gladstone High won second in the drum major awards and Charter Oak won third.

Upland's Police-Cadet Post #606 won in the Color Guard division. Mayor Abner B. Haldeman and Mayor Pro-Tem John Mc Carthy led the parade in city fire engines and presented the trophies to all the winners.

Committee Attempts To 'Create Future Audiences'

Ms. Helen Williamson is publicity chairman for the Foothill Philharmonic Committee. Ms. Williamson is a resident of Claremont. "But," she said, "Our members come from all over the Pomona Valley. For instance, we have a number of members from Upland and also from the San Dimas area."

The Foothill Philharmonic Committee was founded in 1957 by Ms. N. Chandler, one of the leading lights of the Los Angeles

Social Register. Ms. Chandler, a constant and strong supporter of the city's philharmonic, met with 50 women in Claremont. They discussed the formation of a committee dedicated to supporting the Orchestra.

Since then the committee has grown substantially. "Today we're big enough to be heard," Ms. Williamson continued. "It's my hope that the committee can raise enough money to bring the Orchestra out to this area more often. At present the Philharmonic is here just once a year. They play at Bridge's Auditorium. I'd also like to see the Sunday afternoon concerts for children resumed. The last one was held in Bridge's Auditorium some years ago. Since then we've had to bus the young people into the L. A. Music Center."

She said one of the committee's main goals is to "Create future audiences. When we're before the public," Ms. Williamson explained it's easier to do this. "Many of our members are musicians, women who understand and love music. When you know and understand good music, you automatically want other people to appreciate it as much as you do."

You Can Always Tell A Hogshead

It's a certain fact the average woman deals more frequently with weights and measures than the average man. At least I assume this is true. I have not run a survey on the subject, so the above statement is frankly off the top of my head.

Recently a friend gave me a little bound book. Inside is a several page listing of various weights and measures. Reading it over, I was startled at how little I did know -- about avoirdupois weight, for example. I'd never even heard of 'Troy' weight, and I knew I was sadly lacking when I read that six feet equal a fathom. (I'd never had the vaguest idea about that one!) Assuming that other women might be as uninformed in this area as I, here is a quick listing of various weights and measures. It is hoped this newfound knowledge will make the typical Ms's day a little brighter.

LIST

Twenty grains supposedly equal one scruple. (That's right. And I always thought scruples had something to do with ethics or one's moral outlook.) A household hint to enthusiastic cooks -- 36 bushels equal one chaldron (and that has nothing to do with Halloween or MacBeth's weird sisters.) One hectoliter equals 2,8375 bushels, and one English ton equals 1,016 metric ton.

For those who tittle a few, it's interesting to note that four gills equal one pint, 31 1/2 gallons equal one barrel, and two barrels equal one hogshead. Bottoms up, ladies.

Club Members Plan Holiday Botique

The Cucamonga-Alta Loma Women's Club invites the public to do their Christmas shopping at the club's First Annual Christmas Boutique to be held Saturday, November 11 at the Pines Mobile Home Country Club, 9999 Foothill Blvd., in Cucamonga.

Members of the club have been working since last spring creating items to offer for sale. Boutique items to be offered include: jewelry, ceramics, decor accessories, children's clothing, Christmas ornaments, breads and fruitcakes, and knitted, crocheted and macrame items.

Entrance to the Boutique will require a 50¢ donation. The sale will begin at 10:00 a.m. and shoppers may purchase items from various unique displays until 12:30, at which time a break will be taken.

During the break shoppers may wish to have cookies and coffee or tea from the Junorettes' refreshment booth. All profits from the concession will be for the new Junorette club's own treasury.

At 1:00 p.m. the sale of boutique items will resume and continue through 1:30 with a "silent auction." During the "silent auction" all items which were not sold during the previous session will be bid on by pencil. A minimum bid opened will be written on a pad of paper beside the item. Shoppers will circulate and sign their name and bid offer over the minimum amount. They may also overbid a previous offer as many times as they wish during the half hour of "silent auction." At 1:30 a bell will ring signifying the close of the sale and all merchandise will go to the last bidder.

Further information on the boutique may be obtained by calling Ms. Kathy Cox, chairman at 987-5495.

League Gives 'October' Tea

To most, October may be the month of full yellow moons, black cats and pumpkins with grotesque grins. But to the Assistance League of Upland, the month of October is "one of the most colorful of the year."

The League has chosen October to honor some of the women in the area. Each year at this time invitations are sent to women in the West End who are interested in their community, and willing to give financial and moral support to the league philanthropies.

The league will hold a tea from 3-5 p.m. today at the home of Ms. N. Gray in Upland. Ms' C. R. Day and W. Koessler, tea committee, have worked with Ms. D. E. White in an effort to make this year's tea a success.

Assisting with arrangements are Ms' Joyce Merrell, Teri Lu-

by, Erumund Accomazzo, D. A. Dona, T. Parker, B. Claffin, E. Hendersen, J. Mortensen, A. MacGarthy, P. Mahoney, I. Marbuger, A. Dakin and R. McElvany. The Assistance League will honor two of its patronesses, Ms. B. Allen and C. Gillespie.

Ms. Allen has been involved in 4-H and PTA work and is presently a reader for the Recording for the Blind. Ms. Gillespie has been a primary teacher, principal, consultant and presently is assistant superintendent, educational services, Montclair-Ontario School District.

Approximately 125 girls from the third through the sixth grades learn sewing, cooking, crafts, music, good grooming and nutrition in classes at the clubhouse. The club is housed in the Jerene Appleby Harnish wing of the League center on Archibald Ave.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of lace fashioned with a high neckline and long cuffed sleeves. She carried a fall bouquet with her white Bible.

Matron of honor was Ms. Lor Patterson. Bridesmaid was Ms. Judy Flynn. Best man was Willson Quick. E. Dunn Hussey and Michael Warren were ushers.

The couple is at home in Belmont.

You need $40,000,000,000.

You, Los Angeles. One of the wealthiest communities on earth, glamour capital of America, mecca for millions who come to enjoy our benign climate and bountiful sunshine.

Just why is it that we have such a lousy record when it comes to helping ourselves?

Of the 10 mega-cities in this country, L.A. is last when it comes to supporting the United Crusade. (Last year Cleveland and Pittsburgh raised three times as much per capita as L.A., St. Louis and Philadelphia twice as much.) The United Crusade supports more than 250 different organizations in Greater Los Angeles which provide direct services to over 2-1/2 million people every year. Yet, we're only able to give 60% of the desperately needed social and health services other cities are getting because the United Crusade hasn't had the financial support to go full measure.

You need the United Crusade just as much as they need you. So be a little selfish. Give generously. You've got what it takes.

FOOD

Mexican Hero--Food To Glow On--Comprende?

Enzymes--As Digestive Aids

Fall is back-to-school time. Aside from cracking the books again, it's also the time for renewing old friendships and enjoying the most exciting sports season of them all -- football! Football season is fun time! There's the thrill when the hometown team wins, followed by the exciting after-the-game victory party. There is also the smaller "get together" when friends gather by the TV set to view the big game at home. It's at times like these that teen-agers like to have tasty, easy to fix foods about, the kind that are suited to munching from the lap. And because good nutrition is essential to good health, it is important that teen-age party foods be selected with care.

With good nutrition in mind, California Avocado Advisory Board home economists have developed this Mexican Hero sandwich which has what it takes to build bodies that glow -- and that's what good nutrition is all about.

The base of this "football hero" is crusty French bread. It's heaped high with fillings reminiscent of the Mexican tostada. Mouth watering California avocado slices, laden with vitamins A, B and C, plus a good amount of iron, take the place of butter for a creamy beginning. Hot refried beans, plus chili-seasoned ground beef form the sandwich's protein heart -- and as wise teenagers know, proteins are the most important body builders. Crispy shredded lettuce, plus red ripe tomato slices and cuts of fresh green onion combine to form the salad top. Here again we find the wealth of vitamins A, B and C typically hidden in fresh fruits and vegetables.

An additional sprinkling of tangy American cheese decorates the top of the filling along with the added blessing of more luscious avocado slices. Unbeatable and authentic flavor is achieved with a here and there dash of garlic salt and bottled taco sauce.

The nice thing about this party sandwich is that most of its components can be prepared before the game. Avocados can be sliced, dipped in lemon juice, and stored in the refrigerator along with the sliced lettuce, tomato, onion and grated cheese. The meat mixture can also be cooked ahead and reheated at "half time" along with the beans. It only takes a minute to assemble this "hero" of the day and set out bowls of corn chips for a crunchy accompaniment.

Popular drinks to serve, begin with milk. Try the low fat or nonfat kind and whiz it in the blender with bananas and ice milk. Served with the Mexican Hero sandwich, it's hard to believe that such good eating is also good for you.

MEXICAN HERO

1/2 lb. lean ground beef
1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 ripe California avocados
1 long loaf French bread
Garlic Salt
1 8 oz. can refried beans, heated
Shredded lettuce
Bottled taco sauce (optional)
1 - 2 tomatoes, sliced
2 green onions, sliced
1/2 cup shredded sharp American cheese
Corn chips (optional)

Brown beef, stirring until crumbly; drain fat. Stir in salt and chili powder. Keep warm.

Halve and peel avocados; cut into slices. Split French bread in half lengthwise; lightly toast cut side under the broiler. Arrange layer of avocado slices on bottom half of bread; sprinkle with garlic salt. Spread even layer of hot beans over avocado, followed by hot meat mixture. Cover meat with shredded lettuce. If desired, sprinkle with taco sauce. Cover with layer of tomato slices, then sprinkle with onions and cheese. Arrange row of lengthwise avocado slices over all; sprinkle with garlic salt. Cover with top half of bread. Cut into slices; if desired, serve with corn chips.

Makes 6 servings.

Enzyme-containing preparations are offered for sale as digestive aids. Plus, raw vegetables or their juices have received much attention because they contain enzymes. However, taking an oral enzyme preparation or consuming raw vegetables or their juices because they contain enzymes does not improve digestion.

USDA Halts Pork Entry

The spread of a deadly swine disease has moved the U. S. Department of Agriculture to prohibit import of live hogs and fresh pork from countries where the disease is known to exist, including Mexico.

Officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service took the action to prevent additional infection in the U. S. of hog cholera, which has hit several midwestern and southeastern states.

Noting that many families who live near the border do some food shopping in Mexico, USDA officials asked shoppers not to attempt to bring fresh pork or pork products such as sausage into the U. S.

USDA said only five countries -- Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland -- are considered free of hog cholera and two other serious diseases affecting hogs, foot-and-mouth disease and African swine fever.

Board Assails 'Milk Intolerance' Flop

The National Research Council's Food and Nutrition Board has denounced recent "alarmist and sensational" publicity about "milk intolerance" in some non-caucasian races.

The Food and Nutrition Board, in a statement published in the most recent Journal of the American Dietetic Association, called "highly inappropriate" the discouraging of programs involving milk supplies or its consumption.

The national board recognized recent research finding some non-caucasians having lower tolerance than others for the milk sugar, lactose.

Peach Kuchen For Busy Homebakers

There is probably no more tantalizing aroma than that of bread baking, and certainly nothing is more irresistible than a coffee cake fresh out of the oven.

For the woman who takes pride in making her own breads, but often doesn't have time to start from scratch, this peach kuchen is ideal. Made with a packaged hot roll mix, it is quick and convenient. But more important, it is flexible, allowing you to experiment with variations with no fear of failure.

The recipe makes two coffee cakes. If you bake them ahead, cool the cakes before wrapping. Reheat, uncovered, in a 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

PEACH KUCHEN: 3/4 cup warm (not hot) beer; 1 package (13-3/4 oz.) hot roll mix; 2 eggs; 1/4 cup sugar; 1/4 cup butter, melted and cooled; 1/4 cup golden raisins; 1 tsp. milk; 4 medium peaches, peeled and sliced; Streusel topping (recipe below). Pour warm beer into bowl. Sprinkle in yeast from hot roll mix; stir until dissolved. Combine with one of the eggs, sugar, butter and raisins;

blend in dry ingredients from roll mix. Cover; let dough rise until doubled, 30 to 45 minutes. Punch down and divide into halves; pat each portion into a well-greased 9-inch round cake pan. Make egg glaze by beating together the remaining egg and milk; brush mixture evenly over each portion of dough. Sprinkle evenly with streusel topping; arrange peach slices on top.

In 'Young (Yuk) Winston (Nudge),' Tone Is Derisive

Movies have been called to pay the piper for every sort of excess committed during their golden age. Production budgets that once were needlessly inflated have now been cut to the bone. Many individual film makers whose abilities were overestimated are now being undervalued. And finally, the product of which the industry was most proud—the cast-of-thousands epic—is now very nearly a thing of the past. The old caveat emptor caught up with these blockbusters, for the lavish spectacles made in the Hollywood era and in the early period of Anglo-American film cooperation could not possibly deliver what ads and publicity routed.

The change in audience attitude may account for the curious tone of Young Winston (Columbia), the much-publicized film biography covering the early years of Sir Winston Churchill. It is a good picture, not just a good picture of its kind. See it, enjoy it, and take it any way you like. The worst that can happen is that you may leave the theater a little perplexed.

Why perplexed? Because there seems something terribly ironic about Young Winston. From first frame to last, Richard Attenborough, who directed the film, and Carl Foreman, who wrote and produced it, maintain a self-conscious attitude that becomes almost derisive of both content and form. The two seem to be winking continually from the other side of the screen, saying, "All this pageantry is so much nonsense, of course, but I think you might enjoy this next bit coming up." By the middle of the movie, you are very much in their confidence. And at least one of the actors—young Simon Ward, who plays the title role with a good deal of verve—seems to be in on the gag: His performance is all nudges and comic takes, but effective nevertheless, for it seems to epitomize the attitude of the film makers.

Nothing is straight-out; touches of irony or hey-now-get-this color nearly every scene. Yet this is done, for the most part, so very subtly that it is not likely to put you off. The film's most blatant device—but one that is also very effective—is its use of separate interviews with the film's three principals: Lord Randolph Churchill (Robert Shaw), Jennie Churchill (Anne Bancroft), and Winston. Yes, interviews. The interviewer is off-camera throughout; the subjects speak into the camera and say very frank and personal things.

Though why not? The natural style of any biographical film, in which a life is presented in bits and pieces, is almost necessarily Brecht's narrative realism, in which plot and dramatic climaxes are played down in favor of cumulative effect.

Young Winston touches all the bases. You get the big, splashy action sequences that must be there to convey the quality of the man's remarkably adventurous career as a soldier and correspondent before he settled down to Parliament. But you also get a very personal presentation of his two parents, Robert Shaw's exceptional portrayal of Lord Randolph is so well rounded that he manages to create sympathy for a man who was fundamentally about as unsympathetic as any father and husband could be. And Anne Bancroft seems just right as Winston's American mother.

Yet still there is that oddness of tone, that self-conscious irony that seems to curl the film's every effect just slightly at the edges. It may well be that this is the only sort of epic biography of Winston Churchill that the urbane and hip Richard Attenborough could bring himself to undertake. At any rate, his skepticism does show through, giving Young Winston that almost decadent quality of a work of some excellence that comes at the end of an exhausted tradition.

Robert Wise At Arts Conference

"Sound of Music" Producer/Director Robert Wise will give the keynote address to several hundred representatives of California arts councils at the outset of the conference, "Blueprint for the Arts: An Alliance of California Arts Councils."

The conference, cosponsored by the California Arts Commission and the Conference Committee for the Alliance of California Arts Councils, is to take place Oct. 28-29 at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel in N. Hollywood and at California State University at Northridge.

Wise will deliver his address at the conference luncheon at 12:30 p.m. Saturday in the Banquet Room at Cal State, Northridge. He is expected to discuss the potential of the community arts council movement as well as his own insights into the state of the arts.

Robert Wise, whose "The Sound of Music" became the biggest money maker in film history, was appointed to the National Council on the Arts by President Nixon. Other films by Wise, a two-time Oscar winner, include "The Andromeda Strain," "West Side Story," "The Sand Pebbles," "Star," and the soon-to-be-released "Two People."

Other events scheduled for the conference are geared to allow the delegates from the state's more than 200 arts councils to play an active role in designing the "blueprint" for the arts in their communities and throughout California. Noted panelists, experienced in the arts, will discuss funding, audience development and arts council programming. Among the panelists will be Ms. Howard Ahmanson, board member, L. A. County Museum of Art and Performing Arts Council of the L. A. Music Center.

EVERY DOLLAR YOU SAVE IS A BOOST TO THE ECONOMY.

Some people would have you believe that saving money is a disservice to the economy of this country. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Your money is loaned out to build new homes and churches and shopping centers, and low-cost multiple dwellings.

And that means jobs. Jobs for carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, road-builders, painters and a host of other occupations. Jobs for the people who cut the timber, make the bricks, manufacture the plumbing materials and paint.

The list is endless. It goes on and on. Your savings working to build the economy while they are building for your future.

It has been estimated that every dollar provided by a Savings and Loan creates four dollars of new economic activity. As a result, the $38 billion we loaned in mortgages last year generated $152 billion in the economy.

Do something good for yourself. Open an account at a Savings and Loan Association. We'll put your money to work—for you and for the country.

Fancy Home Burglar Alarms Turn Off Police

'Invisible' Now Visible

Any of the guys who dated Carolyn W. can confirm it. Her family -- her neighborhood -- had the best security system going: an old gal across the street, eternally peeking from behind the curtains and informing about the goings on. If at times her "suspicious characters" turned out to be embarrassed beaus paying court -- well, every alarm system has its faults.

Indeed, some of those now-married swains might love to have the old gal in their blocks now. Burglaries and housebreakings in suburban cities have increased more than 13 percent in 12 months. In suburban counties they're up nine percent.

Like many householders, Carolyn's friends have turned to mechanical or electronic gadgetry to watch over their homes. But police say humans are better -- especially better than the "silent alarms" called "dialers" that automatically phone police when an intruder or the pet cat sets them off.

Dialers are popular. They're comparatively sophisticated and cost from $150 to more than $1,500. But they compete favorably for sales against such supposed burglar deterrents as the recorded snarls of Weimaraners or conversing he-men, and a plethora of simple, electrically or mechanically activated lights, buzzers, honkers, sirens, and Klaxons. Sales of all these gadgets have swelled home security into an estimated $75,000,000-a-year industry.

Dialers are silent in that they don't blare to frighten intruders away. They may buzz softly or light a bedroom warning light, but they're made to entrap rather than drive off the thief.

Like most electronic alarm systems, dialers have "sensors" that radiate patterns of radio, sound, or light waves when the user turns the system on.

An object moving into a doorway or any space washed by the invisible waves disrupts them. The disruption electronically triggers a device that dials the police and simultaneously starts a recording that gives police the address of the home presumably being robbed. But the devices don't distinguish between a restless dog and a burglar; false alarms are frequent.

Dialer systems abound where the wealthy dwell, and it's in such areas that police are (excuse, please) most alarmed.

In affluent Scarsdale, N.Y., the police can invoke an ordinance providing a graduated system of fines ranging from $10 to $50 per false alarm from a dialer. Following the examples of Philadelphia and Los Angeles, the state of Maryland has banned dialers that ring phones at law-enforcement agencies. Police in the Washington D.C. suburb of Montgomery County, Maryland, the nation's richest county, recently became the first agency to announce it would enforce the ban. Lawmen in wealthy Oakland County, Michigan, between Flint and Detroit, and in Marin County, Calif., northwest of San Francisco say they may forbid dialers that dial them.

"Windstorms, rainstorms, pets, power failures, poor maintenance, residents who forget to turn the systems off (and others who turn them on before everyone in the family is home for the night) -- all these regularly cause false alarms.

"The first flash of lightning and our switchboard blossoms. We just can't answer all the calls," says Lt. Charles Federline of the Montgomery County police.

Complains Capt. Harvey Teague of the Marin County police: "Those things (dialers) give us an awful lot of problems. Cheap or expensive, all of 'em go off accidentally at times -- I'd say 99 percent of the time."

Some of the alarms keep dialing police intermittently after being set off. So if the resident or other authorized person isn't around to adjust the tripped alarm it just keeps sounding.

Harried police tend to "get sloppy" responding to frequent false alarms, says Captain Teague. If that's bad for alarm owners, it could be fatal for the policeman, whose carelessness could put him in front of a burglar's bullet.

Answering false alarms squanders huge amounts of police time, officials say. In most jurisdictions responding officers are instructed to leave their cars and find the assumed intruder's break-in point. Failing that, they must reach the house owner or resident to gain entry and to search inside.

When the alarm goes off in a vacant house, it's often difficult to find someone to let police in. And some police departments dispatch two cars to each alarm to minimize ambushes, which have become increasingly common.

A new distilled spirit, named Igor the Invisible, is gaining widespread popularity wherever it has been introduced.

The spirit, as versatile as vodka but much less visible to the taste or sense of smell, is especially favored as an ingredient for mixing with tonic and juices and for Bloody Marys. At 60 proof, Igor is ideal for those who prefer mild aperitifs or enjoy staying longer with a drink at cocktail and other parties.

Igor the Invisible has brought about the development of new drinks as well -- drinks that are tasty and refreshing.

THE ARTS

Symphony Marks 50th Anniversary

The Glendale Symphony inaugurates its Fiftieth Anniversary Season at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 4, at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles. Two fine young soloists, soprano Claudia Cummings and baritone Douglas Lawrence, join Music Director Carmen Dragon in a program of operatic excerpts and concert favorites.

Ms. Cummings will sing the arias "O beau pays" from Meyerbeer's Les Huguenots and "Juliet's Waltz" from Gounod's Romeo and Juliet. Lawrence will offer the "Song to the Evening Star" from Wagner's Tannhauser and the "Drinking Song" from Thomas' Hamlet. The arias will be sung in the original languages. Both artists will also be featured in the comic duet "Pronto lo son" from Donizetti's Don Pasquale, sung in English.

Carmen Dragon will conduct the orchestra in Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, Bartok's Two Portraits, Respighi's Pines of Rome, and the Los Angeles Premiere of Carmen Dragon's own Ode to the Destiny of Man dedicated in memory to J. E. Hoeft, recently deceased benefactor of the Symphony Association.

Music Director Carmen Dragon begins his eighth season with the Glendale Symphony. Noted as a conductor, arranger, educator, and composer, Maestro Dragon is among the nation's most respected musicians.

Soprano Claudia Cummings, a native of the San Francisco area, is making her third appearance with the Glendale Symphony. She also debuts this month with the San Francisco Opera as the Forest Bird in Wagner's Siegfried. Lawrence has sung leading operatic roles and has appeared as a soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl. He has also been active as a singer in Hollywood's studios, dubbing the voices of many famous stars in numerous films.

Tickets are available at the following prices: $4.95, $4.40, $3.85, $3.30, and $2.45 ($2.20 for students). Tickets may be obtained at the Music Center Box Office and all Mutual and Liberty Ticket Agencies. For additional information call the Symphony office at (213) 246-7165.

The group will meet from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays in the Drawing Studio on the second floor of Lang Art Building at Scripps. A graduate student will supervise the sessions. Artists should bring their own materials. A small fee will be charged to cover expenses.

An Admirer Of Amsterdam

No matter how famous, glamorous, exciting, and praised, most great cities of the world have their detractors and their enemies. Many who love London cannot stomach Paris, and vice versa. Rome, despite its incomparable history, leaves some men cold. Many Italians criticize Naples. Tyroleans cannot wait to get out of Vienna. Northern Spaniards often shun Seville. And so it goes.

But not, it seems to me, where Amsterdam is concerned. Is there any visitor or indweller who doesn't like it? If so, he or she is keeping wisely quiet. For, as the British thriller writer Alistair MacLean once said with so much justice, Amsterdam "is probably the most beautiful city in the world with the friendliest inhabitants you'll find anywhere."

Geoffrey Cotterell does not come right out and endorse these superlatives in so many words, but there is little in this book to make one feel that "after a lifetime visiting, reading about, and admiring Amsterdam," he would disagree. Nor can the reader of this book be other than tempted to agree that here indeed is a town combining in unusual measure peace, stability, great history, the flavor of pleasant living, and the riches of an extraordinary artistic and intellectual past.

True, Amsterdam today has its turbulences. Because of its tolerance it has become a kind of international hippy hostel and its own youth occasionally tries its hand at agitation. But peace and stability are still the marks of Amsterdam and of Amsterdammers.

What makes this volume of special interest is that it tells not merely the tale of a town but, rather, recounts the history of Europe during the past thousand years. For in Amsterdam most of what has made Europe uniquely great was either born, experienced or reflected. Rembrandt, Spinoza, Erasmus and little Anne Frank, such names bespeak the greatness, the glory and the misery through which Amsterdam has passed and from which has come forth its strong and enduring individuality.

Rollie Fingers Was 'Born To Baseball'

What's it like to have a son who was a key factor in Oakland's winning World Series? "Wonderful," according to Ms. Edna Fingers of Cucamonga. Ms. Fingers is the mother of Oakland player Rollie Fingers.

Only the explosive bat of catcher Gene Tenace kept Rollie from winning a second "most valuable player" award for World Series play, the first coming when his exploits were a key factor in 1964 as Upland Post 73 won the American Legion World Series. Tenace equaled a major league World Series standard by clubbing four homers for the champion Athletics and was credited with driving in nine of the 15 runs scored by the titlists in the seven-game series.

First to congratulate the unlikely hero, who had slammed just five homers during a season of play, was Fingers -- surely the runnerup for the MVP award.

He became only the third pitcher in all series history to work in six games and his credits included one win and a pair of saves -- the latter being a series record. Earlier he had notched one win and two other saves as the Athletics were eliminating Detroit for the American League championship, while in regular season Fingers had posted an 8-9 won-lost record and commanded a 2.50 earned run average. Fingers was literally born to baseball, his mother having been in the stands only hours earlier while watching her husband pitch in one of those industrial league games the area around Steubenville, Ohio, was noted for.

Finger's father, George, made a brief appearance with the Columbus Red Birds of the Class AAA American Assn. in 1940, but was sent down to Albany, Ga. for more seasoning.

But World War II was on the horizon. George became one of the nation's earliest draftees and by the time the 1941 season rolled around he was serving with the Ohio National Guard and playing like a foot soldier at places like Camp Atterbury and Camp Shelby.

More than four years later, he was to resume this task of picking up the pieces, but the combination of low pay in minor league camps and the starting of a family was too much of a handicap.

As it was, George found it more rewarding to work in the steel mills that abound in that region and pitch baseball for plant teams in places like Weirton, W. V., and Toronto, Ohio.

It wasn't long before the Fingers household, like many another from that region, migrated west and found compatible conditions in and around the great steel mill of Kaiser in Fontana.

George and wife, including a second son, Gordon, looked around the Whittier area but finally settled in Cucamonga after seeing "just about a baseball field on any corner," as George remembers.

Gordon was good enough to be signed into the Athletics fold by then Oakland Manager John McNamara and had a winning season at Coos Bay, Ore. But a combination of things, including a military interruption, curtailed his pro career and now, like Dad, he's a group supervisor at California Youth Authority in Chino.

It is history now that Rollie went on to play for the Seven-Ups in Cucamonga Citrus Little League and win the coveted Jamie Blatnick Memorial Award for his all-around role as a player and good citizen.

He went on to play both Pony and Colt League in Upland, with George imparting all his knowledge about the game.

Rollie was carried on the 1964 roster of that Upland Legion team, but his primary call that summer was with the famed Dodger Rookies, under the late and great Manager Kenny Myers. George served as coach.

But after completing the season with the Rookies, both he and Upland teammate (Montclair resident) Mike Price were summoned to join the Legion team and they were instrumental in the playoff success of the team en route to the final conquest at Travelers Field in Little Rock, Ark.

Fingers had been given a long look by the Dodgers, of course, and also the Minnesota Twins, who flew him to their home base for a three-day look, but it was the Athletics which tapped his services and his long climb to the pinnacle of the sport has been well documented.

Rollie and wife Jill will soon be returning home to share renewed acquaintances with many of those people who played such an important part in his earlier roles.

Pack Wins Over Upland

The big red machine from Claremont is now number one in the San Antonio League. The Wolfpack smashed the high-flying Upland Highlanders last Friday night and trounced them 33-0.

The game was supposed to be a defense battle. In a way it was, but the Claremont defense prevailed.

It wasn't only the 'Pack defense that provided the surprise though.

"That offense just kept moving," said a jubilant Esper Keiser after the game.

The Claremont ground game chalked up 241 yards, while Bill Schlick piloted the air attack to a total of 94 yards.

Brad Kessler, the Wolfpack's All-CIF running back, netted 147 yards in 19 plays to lead the running attack for the Reds.

Last year, Upland whipped the 'Pack by a 48-6 margin and Keiser admitted, "We were embarrassed last year."

But this year it's the Upland green wearing the red faces. It all started in the first quarter, but it didn't look like the Big Red was going to be overpowering.

Claremont took the opening kickoff and started to roll on the ground, but fumbled to the Upland defense on the third play from scrimmage.

Then, Scot quarterback Mike Scharbrough immediately went to the air and completed a 20-yard pass to end Rick Martin.

Both defenses halted any offensive threat for the first 11 minutes of the game, but the Wolfpack broke the ice when Schlick hit Dean Erickson on a 48-yard screen pass for a touchdown just before the end of the first quarter.

Jim Martinez added the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

The 'Pack then waited until two minutes remained in the half to score again. This one was another Schlick pass, but this time to end Lance Black for 28 yards on a fourth-and-15 situation. Martinez again added the PAT and Claremont went into the locked room with a 14-0 lead.

Kessler scored his only touchdown of the evening when he capped a 74-yard drive with a one-yard plunge into the end zone with 2:02 minutes left in the third frame.

The fourth Wolfpack TD came when linebacker Jeff Barker recovered a Claremont fumble in the end zone after running back Erickson had juggled the ball while crossing the goal line.

Erickson then recorded his second score of the night when he went over on a 12-yard run with 4:37 remaining in the game.

Coming into the game, Upland was ranked No. 2 in the CIF 3-A poll and Claremont was rated in the ninth spot. There is a possibility now that the 'Pack could be in the top five in this week's ratings.

Local Man Mourns Robinson

One Upland resident, John "Spider" Jorgensen, is among those in baseball who today are mourning the passing of Jackie Robinson, who died today in Stamford, Conn.

Jorgensen was a teammate of the former UCLA four-sport standout when Robinson first broke the color barrier with the Montreal Royals of the Class 3A International League in 1946 and again with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Jorgensen, now a scout for the Kansas City Royals, played third base for the Dodgers in 1947, termed Robinson "the greatest competitor I ever played with."

"He could get up for every game. With two strikes on him, he was the best hitter I ever saw or played against. He would look bad on the first two pitches, but then, look out!"

Jorgensen, now in Sarasota, Fla., to help at the instructional camp of the Royals, batted .274 for the Dodgers in 1947 and played until 1951, when he finished his career with the New York Giants.

Ghosts Of The Pomona Valley

Ghosts? There are no such things.

So the sensible, the unsuperstitious, the determined but trembling realists used to insist. Today nobody's really sure. Books have been written, stories told. People have seen and had their friends rejoin with 'It was only a hallucination.'

'But I swear...I saw it, Here Right here in this room...'

A ghost. Hamlet's father walked to warn him. Rudyard Kipling's ghosts scared the living blazes out of their victims, and some of Edgar Allen Poe's ghosts weren't ghosts at all, but living-dead members of the house of Usher.

But I digress. It's almost Halloween. The moon rises full in the Heavens, the stars cross malignantly. Bats flutter in their caves.

The word is out and the hobgoblins' ears twitch.

There are ghosts in the Pomona Valley.

Marlene Racost was an unsuccessful Hollywood starlet who wore out her shoes tramping from casting studio to agent and back again in the early 1920's. Marlene, an orphan, had grown up in the Middle West. Early in life she realized that her one asset was the fact she was beautiful. Marlene had long, curling black hair, deeply set brown eyes, a supple figure and legs that made men glad women were finally allowed to wear short dresses.

But Marlene's attempts to seduce Hollywood ended in failure. Dismayed, she finally went to work as a waitress and saved enough money to put herself through secretarial school. Always ambitious, Marlene graduated with honors. But she then went from job to job, trying to find something worthy of her efforts. At last her moment arrived. She was hired to take letters for one Forrest Thayer. Thayer was a very rich, very old man. He had inherited most of his money while he was still young and had married a young actress who died mysteriously a few years later. Thayer then remarried a young woman who looked a good deal like his first wife. They were married two years when she committed suicide. Little was known of Thayer's third wife, except that she, too, died young, and Thayer immediately married her twin sister. The sister drowned on their honeymoon.

Marlene Racost had heard of Thayer (few millionaires escaped her notice); she wanted money, so became determined to become the fifth Ms. Thayer.

Forrest Thayer lived in a mansion outside Pomona. When Marlene arrived, she was momentarily dismayed to find Thayer bedridden, but this did not alter her plans. The old man's nurse told Marlene her charge was not expected to live much longer. He had no heirs, so his wealth would be divided among his business associates.

Thayer, though elderly and sick, was attractive to Marlene. 'You look like my wife,' he told her. Marlene was installed in the house as Thayer's private secretary. She was delighted to have a large bedroom, bath and sitting room all to herself.

One thing did not delight Marlene. Thayer's references to his wife disturbed her. Which wife was he talking about? Over the fireplace in the main room hung a portrait that Marlene disliked. It was the picture of a young woman about her age who resembled her almost remarkably. The woman had the same black, curling hair, the same facial features, even the same dark eyes, except for an important difference. The woman in the painting had a strange cast to her eyes. It made them look cruel, almost awful! Each time Marlene looked at the portrait, she felt a slight chill creep up her spine.

Not long after Marlene's arrival, Thayer took a turn for the worse. His private nurse then came down with influenza, and Marlene was put in charge of the old man until a substitute nurse could be found.

Marlene always liked being in charge. But when the servants left the house at night, she didn't like being alone with the old man. She was frightened, but didn't know why, and tried to shake her apprehension.

One night Marlene

went into the old man's room to wake him and give him his medicine. She found Thayer already awake and fretful, sitting on a chair beside his bed was a veiled woman in a long black dress. Marlene was startled. No one ever came to visit Thayer. But the woman motioned her away, so Marlene left the room. It must be a relative, she decided. But she was uncertain, so went back into the room. The woman was gone. The old man was asleep.

The next night the same thing happened. Marlene couldn't understand why she lacked the courage to ask the woman who she was and what she wanted. It wasn't like her to be so unassuming. And Forrest Thayer was always worse after the woman's visits.

The doctor then called at the house, checked the old man and told Marlene he was dying. 'We'll take him to the hospital tomorrow,' he said. 'I'll make the arrangements.'

Marlene realized she would never become the fifth Ms. Thayer, but she was almost glad. She now wanted to leave the old man and the great, strange house as soon as possible.

That night she went back to Thayer's room to give him his medicine. The woman in black was seated, as usual, next to the bed. Thayer, pale and trembling, was staring at her. Marlene could see that he was frightened. She forced herself to act. 'Who are you?' she asked the dark, veiled figure. 'What do you want here? Are you a friend of Mr. Thayer's?'

The woman made no answer, but turned her face away from Marlene, into the shadows. Marlene lost her temper. She ran

'But I Swear
I Saw It.
Here. Right
Here In

toward the woman and ripped away her veil. She stepped back in horror.

The woman's black, curling hair tumbled about her smooth white shoulders. She could have been the woman in the portrait; she could have been Marlene. But she had no face. Where her face should have been, there was nothing. Just a blank.

Marlene screamed and screamed and screamed.

Forrest Thayer died that night. Marlene Racost, her mind gone, was taken to an insane asylum. She stayed there for 37 years. Ms. Racost now is a ward of the state. She lives in a little house on the outskirts of Pomona, and occasionally does sewing work in her home. She has trouble concentrating on a subject for any period of time.

She often spends her evenings brushing, then combing and rebrushing, the long white hair that falls below her grey, skinny shoulders.

In Cucamonga there is a crumbling old winery. There's nothing unusual about the structure, except that it is very old and is reputed to be haunted.

Ghosts in a winery? Well, Cucamonga has had its share of violent history. Not recently, of course, but in the last century and in the century before. There was plenty of action among the Spanish Don class, and later between their Anglo inheritors. Murders and suicides were not infrequent in Cucamonga's early days, but this in itself does not explain the ghost (or ghosts) in the winery.

'We've seen strange lights and heard odd sounds from that place every so often,' said a local resident. 'The fact the winery is haunted isn't news to anyone around here. A couple 'ghost-hunters' have been up this way. One of them even brought a medium along to see if she could get the ghost to materialize. I guess they've had no luck so far.'

'My wife and I have read up on the place, trying to figure who's haunting it and why. We can't find anything about a murder or a suicide. The whole business really doesn't make much sense.'

Of course not. Who would commit suicide in a winery?

Another Cucamonga resident provided a possible explanation.

'Personally, I think the ghost is looking for a good vintage bottle of Lafitte-Rothschild. He's been prowling around for years and hasn't found it yet.'

The sound of running footsteps and childish laughter is most pleasant in a house, even if there are no children living there. A ghost whose primary manifestations are of this nature isn't shunned by any means. In fact, if you have to live in a haunted house, what a delightful way to be haunted!

Tucked away under a foothill, not far to the north of San Dimas, is an old house that now belongs to a family by the name of Carter. When the Carters bought the house in 1968, they didn't know they were buying a haunted house. Even when they entered the house on moving day and heard the sounds of running and laughter upstairs, they thought a neighbor's child had slipped in with the moving men, and was watching them move furniture.

'But the sounds continued,' Ms. Carter said. 'Our own children are grown and out on their own. For a while we persisted in our belief that a neighbor's child was somehow sneaking in and making the noise.'

Ms. Carter said the sounds rarely occurred at night. 'And that led credence to our belief that a living child was sneaking into the house.' 'Then the sounds became more noticeable,' she said. 'It was as if the child was in the room with us.'

'It would walk along with us, giggling,' said her husband. 'The giggling sounded as if it were coming from a child about four years old. The sound came from someplace about level with my hips.'

'Sometimes the invisible little person would follow us,' Ms. Carter continued. 'Other times it would seem to circle around us as we'd walk from room to room.'

'It was so cheery,' Ms. Carter said. 'We're disappointed now that we don't hear the sounds so often. We used to hear noises a couple times a week. Now we hear them only a couple times a month. 'I wonder,' she mused, 'could our ghost child somehow be growing up?'

The most famous ghost story in California is in no way related to the Pomona Valley. However, because the tale is genuine and supernatural in flavor, it has its place here along with the stories of local ghosts.

In the Santa Clara Valley in the city of San Jose is a 160 room mansion that was allegedly designed at the instigation of spirits of the dead. The story of the house begins around the middle of the 19th century in New Haven, Connecticut, where an outgoing, attractive young woman named Sarah Winchester was making a splash in society as the wife of the Winchester Rifle Co. heir.

Tragedy struck Sarah suddenly and mercilessly. Her husband, whom she loved deeply, died a painful, lingering death from tuberculosis. Then her only child, a little girl, died. Sarah was desolate. She felt she had no reason to live and no hope for the future.

Finally, because of a strong interest in the occult (and a desire to believe in something), she attended a lecture given by the Boston medium Adam Coons. At this lecture a miracle took place, or so Sarah thought.

In the middle of the lecture, Coons, who had never met Sarah, turned to her and told her that her husband wanted to talk with her. 'He's in the room now,' Coons said. In fact, he's standing right beside you. Can't you see him?" Sarah, wanting to see her husband more than anyone in this world or the next, finally admitted that she could see him. "At least," she said, "I think I can make out his shadow."

That was enough for Coons. For the next hour and a half, the medium involved himself in a prolonged conversation with Sarah's dead husband. When the conversation concluded, Coons, exhausted, turned to Sarah and told her he had a message for her.

By this time Sarah was sobbing uncontrollably. She bowed her head and listened.

"Your husband said he and your daughter died because the family owns a company that makes weapons of death," Coon announced. "Your husband wants you to know that more tragedy awaits you unless you sell your shares in the company and go West, following the sun."

Coons paused; then delivered a bombshell. "When you reach a place out West -- and you will know the place when you see it -- your husband wants you to erect a great house where all the souls of those who have died because of guns made by the Winchester Co. can live in eternal solitude."

In a sounder frame of mind, Sarah Winchester might have ignored Coon's pronouncement. As it was, she sold her stock shares in the Winchester Co., then sold her New Haven mansion. With $20,000,000 in the bank, she set out to follow the sun, and find a resting place for the 'spirits' that pursued her.

Sarah got as far West as San Jose. She checked into a local hotel, then rented a buggy and drove out into the country. There she spied workmen putting finishing touches on the stone foundation of what looked to be a very large house. At that moment, Sarah had a vision -- the house they were building was her house. She would buy the land from whoever owned it. She and the spirits of the dead would dwell in this house forever.

And that's roughly just what happened. For the next 65 years Sarah Winchester lived in the San Jose mansion. In order to appease more and more spirits, she kept adding on more rooms. Finally, the house had so many rooms in it, Sarah's servants needed maps in order to find their way about.

Every night at midnight a servant rang the resonant bells in townspeople that he was calling the spirits of the dead for dinner. Sarah would preside at the head of a long formal table. All her guests were ectoplasmic and invisible.

So Sarah entertained the dead for 65 years. Then she herself died and was carried out of her great, ghostly mansion in a bolted, closed casket.

In San Jose, Sarah's 160-room 'house of horrors' still stands. According to the locals, every night at midnight, Sarah Winchester seats herself at the head of her long, formal table and has dinner with her friends. She is one of them now. Death was always her goal, and death was her reward.
